Lock Stories That Sale the Place of Open Begging. The plain and open tapoter who acyou in the street purely to beg may generally be known by an amazoverpoliteness in opening the conreation. He is the only person 1 know who begs pardon for taking the liberty of speaking to you, and by this sign you shall know him. They all begin by begging pardon for taking this not so very rare liberty, but only the duffers go on straightway to tap. The proficient tapsters approach the tap sideways, so to speak. Something like this, with a quick touch of the bat

"Beg pardon, sir. I'm sure I 'umbly beg your pardon for takin' the great liberty of speakin' to you in a public thoroughfare like this, which I am quite aware it is a great liberty, sir. though trustin' you will kindly pardon the great liberty of a pore, 'andworkin' man, sir, in takin' the great liberty of askin' if this street is the 'Aymarket. sir?" (Or the way to the Strand or the day of the month, or something,

You answer the question, but you don't stop the stream of apologetics. "Thank you, kindly, sir." pursues the tapsfer, pouring out the words,"thank you kindly, sir, if you'll so far pardon the liberty of a pore, 'ardworkin' man, sir, in askin' the question, which upfortunately I was forced to take the great liberty, sir, through bein' out o' work eighteen months an' nothink to eat since last Toosday fortnight, sir. upon my word of honor, which nothink but the cries for bread of fourteen young children in arms would prevail on me, sir-so lestreme kind as you've bin to me, sir, which I shall never forget to take the very great liberty, sir, In a public thoroughfare, of askin' which is the nearest work ouse?"

If ouce more you give him information instead of coppers, you only provoke another speech of the same sort. for he can go on like that for a deal longer than you want to listen. It is only in the extreme that he will directly ask for money, though I fancy that it is merely caution that marks his guarded way, as they say in the lyric, for if accused of begging by some watchful policeman he can always plead that he was only asking a harmless question. And the questions are endless in variety. I give my solemn word that I was once buttonholed by one of these seedy tapsters with the apologetic request that I would tell him the number of stars on the national flag of the United States! This The Great Tensile Strength of the fact.—Leonard Larkin in the Strand.
